ABOUT

I am a third year Finance PhD student at NYU Stern School of Business. I hold a B.A. and M.A. in economics from Universidad de los Andes (Bogota, CO). My primary research interests span the areas of international macroeconomics and financial intermediation, being particularly interested in the underpinnings of the international monetary system and the asymmetries between emerging and developed economies when accessing international financial markets.

INTERESTS

Financial intermediation, international macroeconomics, monetary policy and inequality.
